Louis Thomas Redel

1863-1949

Lojze (Louis) was born in 1863 in Zagreb, in what was then Austria. Zagreb became part of Yugoslavia, and is now part of Croatia. Louis was a postal clerk in Austria, he was married and the father of a young son, Louis Jr.

He came alone to the USA in 1896. Lojze's name was changed to Louis Redel upon entry into the United States. Family history notes one of his first jobs in America was working on the initial construction of the Brooklyn Bridge. Within a few months, Louis was in Montana and had signed his "Paper of Intent" to start the naturalization process. He came first to East Helena and was employed there in a smelter mine for 6 years. His wife Rose and Louis Jr. joined him there in early 1900. Next he worked in a coal mine in Chestnut for 6 years and finally ended up in Roundup in 1909.

The Redel family was part of a large community of diverse ethnic groups drawn to the mines. The Moffat family, for example, emigrated from Scotland around the same time as the Redel's and also eventually ended up in Roundup. Mining was a primary, yet dangerous source of employment for immigrants coming to Montana in the early 20th century. Mining companies at the time relied heavily on immigrant labor. Some immigrants were attracted by labor agents stationed at major ports of entry in the US. Other mining companies paid for passage from Europe of male workers in exchange for the promise of a job upon arrival. These jobs offered immigrants a chance to earn money despite the severe risks such as explosions, lung disease and roof collapses. Only when men had earned enough money, could they pay for the passage of the rest of their family.

His family's life was largely centered around the coal mining industry, which was the primary economic driver of Musselshell County at the time. He, his wife and by 1913, his 8 children lived at Mining Camp #3, a community provided by the coal company for its workers. These camps often had company housing and general stores, giving the mining companies significant control over the miners' lives.

.Family history relates that after living through the Great Depression Louis told his wife, no matter what, never let anyone who comes to this house go hungry, "so they fed the hobos who came through".

Louis Redel Declaration of Intention 1896

Immigrants went to court and filed this “first paper” to become a citizen. It required the person to renounce their allegiance to their home country. The next step was to live in the United States for 5 years. After that a Petition for Naturalization could be filed with the court. It wasn’t until 1906 that laws were passed requiring a written test be passed proving your English and Civics competency .

The City of Roundup.

Roundup, county seat of Musselshell county, is on the main line of the Chicago, Milwaukee & Puget Sound Railway. The nearest county seat on the main line to the east is one hundred miles; to the west, three hundred miles. The nearest town in central Montana of equal or larger size is Billings, fifty-five miles, and the next nearest is Lewistown, eighty miles. Roundup is less than four years of age.

The site of Roundup is in the level valley of the Musselshell River, bordered by pine covered cliffs to the south and low bluffs to the north. The room is ample for a city of ten times the present size. South of the valley are the sandstone ridges and timbered slopes of the Bull Mountains, beneath which lie the great coal fields of central Montana. This country is excellent for cattle, and in the little valleys and the upland parks is good farming land. To the north, after surmounting the hills, are hundreds of square miles of good farming land extending to the Snowy Mountains, which form the northern boundary of the county. Ten miles north is the agricultural experiment station, established by the state. Four mining camps, or towns, flourish within a distance of four miles of the city, and while they have their own mercantile institutions in part, the greater part of the business of their inhabitants is transacted in Roundup.

Roundup has about fifty business institutions, including four general stores, one hardware store, one hardware and implement store, two grocery and three clothing stores, three lumber yards, two butcher shops, two banks, three blacksmith shops, five hotels and four lodging houses, three restaurants, garage, steam laundry, two newspapers, several real estate firms, grain elevator, feed store, livery stables, confectionery and novelty stores, etc.

The waterworks of Roundup is supplied from wells, whence the water is pumped to a stone reservoir at the top of a hill about 125 feet above the main street. An efficient fire department exists. Electricity for lights and power is furnished from the power house of the Roundup Coal Mining company. Cheap power can be obtained for any manufacturing institution, or mine-run coal will be laid down for about $2.50 a ton.

Roundup has six and one-half miles of cement walks. Main street, one hundred feet wide, extends eight blocks from the railroad to the court house, and is surfaced with gravel as are also other of the important streets. The school house is built of native stone, obtained at the border of the city, the plans being laid for two additional wings each the size of the present structure, to keep pace with the rapid growth of the city. The gray sandstone makes an excellent appearance, which cannot be surpassed by any stone as easily worked. The number of pupils now enrolled is in excess of three hundred.

Few towns in the west of equal size and age have better prospects for future growth. The development of the resources of the tributary country has hardly begun. A flour mill and a creamery are the immediate needs, and there is room and wealth in prospect for farmers without number. Climate, soil and local conditions are especially favorable for a sugar beet factory, and many other manufacturing enterprises would find an excellent location here. No more stores are needed at present, and speculators or adventurers without means are not wanted at all. By those who can promote legitimate enterprises, fortunes will be made in Roundup within the coming years.

To find a name in the Directory, you must know how to spell it.

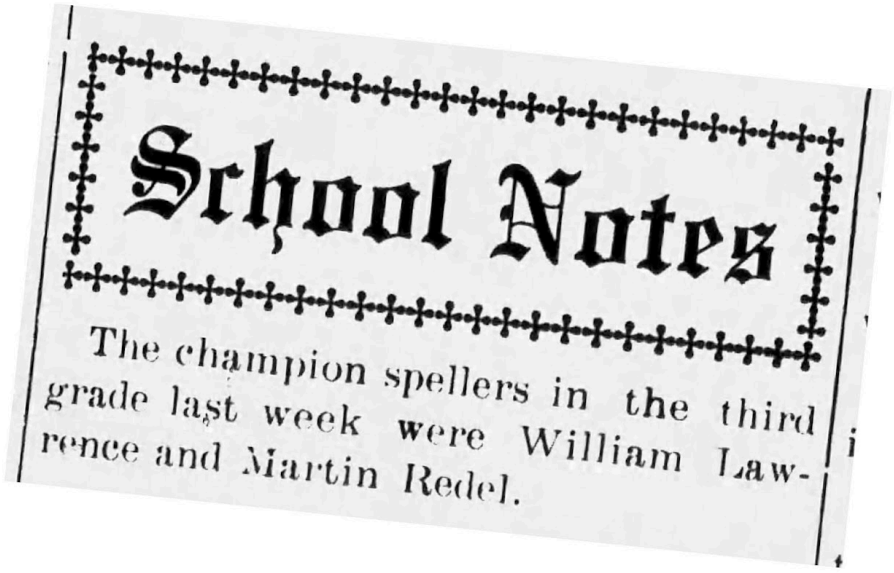
The Redel children attended school in Roundup, although according to the Census, the boys went to work with their father in the mines by age 16. Martin is mentioned in the local paper as being a champion speller. Notice one of his classmates is a Moffat boy. Martin and his future wife must have grown up together.



School Notes

The champion spellers in the third grade last week were William Lawrence and Martin Redel.

Perfect spellers in Miss Clark's room for the month of March are: Delia Day, Ola Matney, Orville Lane, Willie Moffat, Janet Rae, Mary Pluth, Delmar Rose, Martin Redel, Margaret Copeland, Alice Hefford, Irene Hefford, Belle Kelly and Gonda Bald.

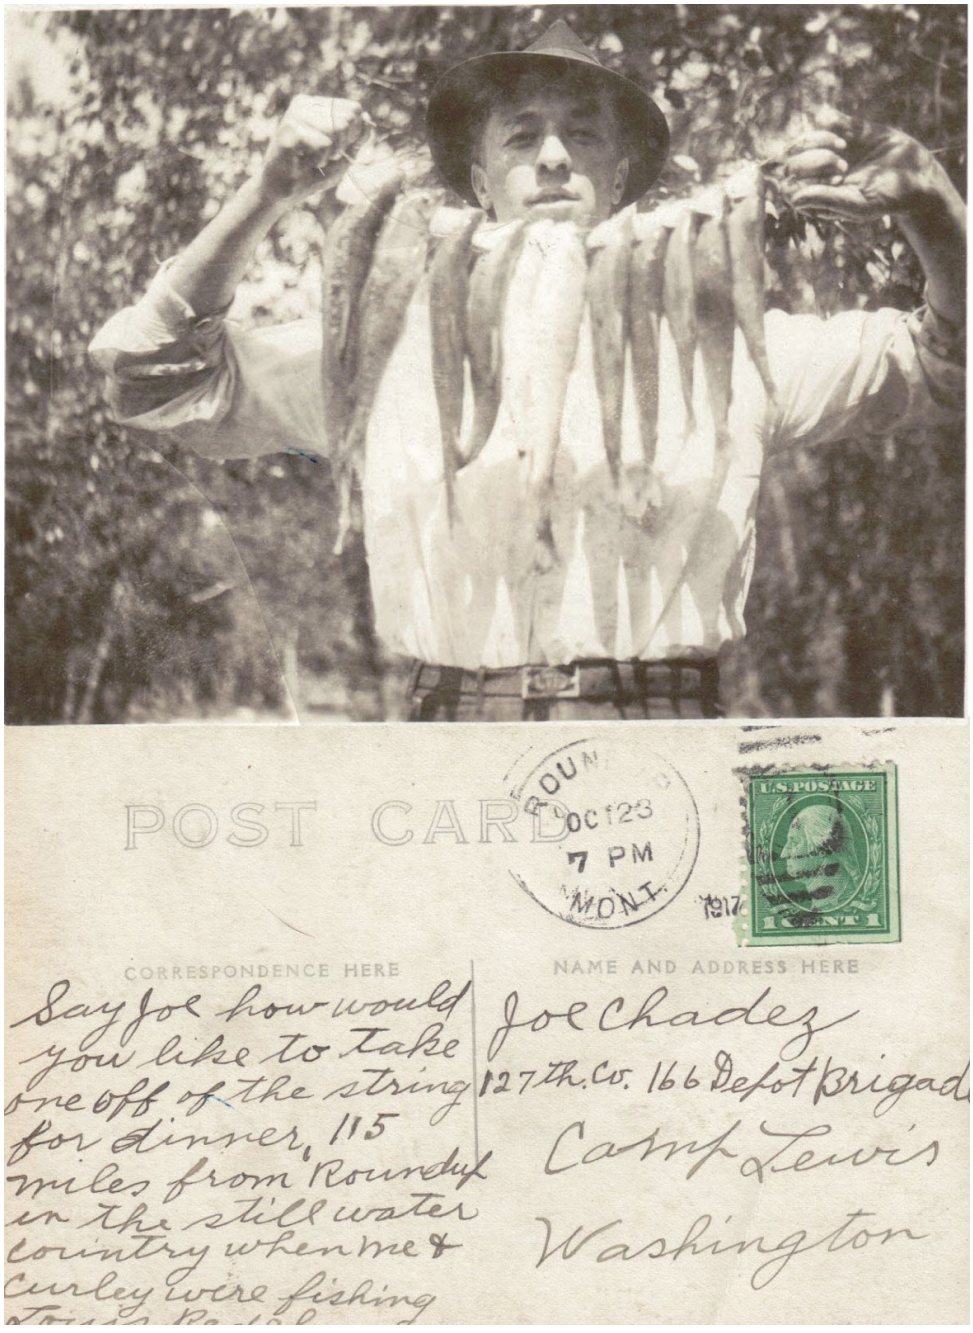
ROUNDUP, MUSSELSHELL COUNTY, MONTANA, FRIDAY, MARCH 1, 1912.

The Roundup Record 1912

Great Uncle Louis Redel Jr in World War I

Many young men from Roundup initially applied for deferments, but by 1917 most were deemed eligible for service. The Redel's oldest son, Louis, was sent to Camp Lewis. Photo postcards from that time show correspondence with his Roundup friend Joe Chadez.



"Say Joe, how would you like to take one off the string for dinner. 115 miles from Roundup in the still water country when me and Curley were fishing. Louis Redel" (Jr.)

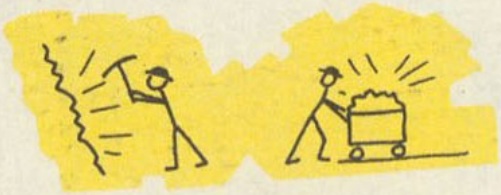
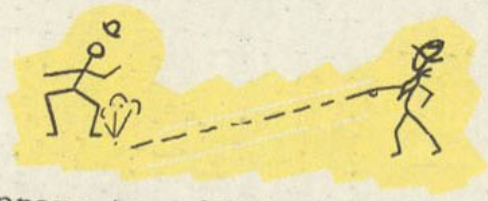
Mussellshell County 1917

Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific R.R. Stations



Montana was nicknamed The Treasure State shortly after the first soldiers of fortune found gold in her stream gravels. Since then metals, coal, oil, marble and jewels galore have been taken from her rock lined vaults. Our mining camps, big and little, are unique. Bearded prospectors still haunt the gulches; huge dredges are greedily munching away at auriferous gravel deposits; labyrinths of underground workings honeycomb mineralized veins.

We will direct interested travellers to active and ghost camps world famous in the mining industry.



Old timers in Montana used to refer to pilgrims as tenderfeet. They also were prone to cold deck such naive parties by inducing them to fork languid looking broncs that promptly came alive and broke in two. They took these guileless strays snipe hunting and let them hold the sack. Such whimsies didn't do the victims any real amount of good but the diamonds-in-the-rough considered the results right humorous.

Nowadays dudes are too valuable to waste like that. We call tourists "guests" and when they sit in with us we deal them a hand of real western hospitality.

1931 - Real Estate Sale

Shortly after James' birth, the Martin Redel family had transferred their real estate lot for $1. Being in the middle of the Depression, it is safe to assume the young family joined many others leaving small towns like Roundup and heading to big cities looking for work. Many Moffats also ended up in Seattle, including Ann's parents and several siblings. Of these, her Mother Jean, her sister Jean and her sister Marion played a big part in Marjorie and James' lives.

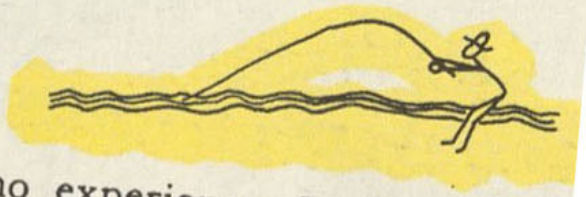
The Roundup Record 1938

200 people from Roundup must have missed the small town they left behind as evidenced by this annual picnic held in Seattle at Woodland Park. Many Redels are listed as attending including “Mr and Mrs Martin Redel and son Jimmy” who was 7 years old at that time.

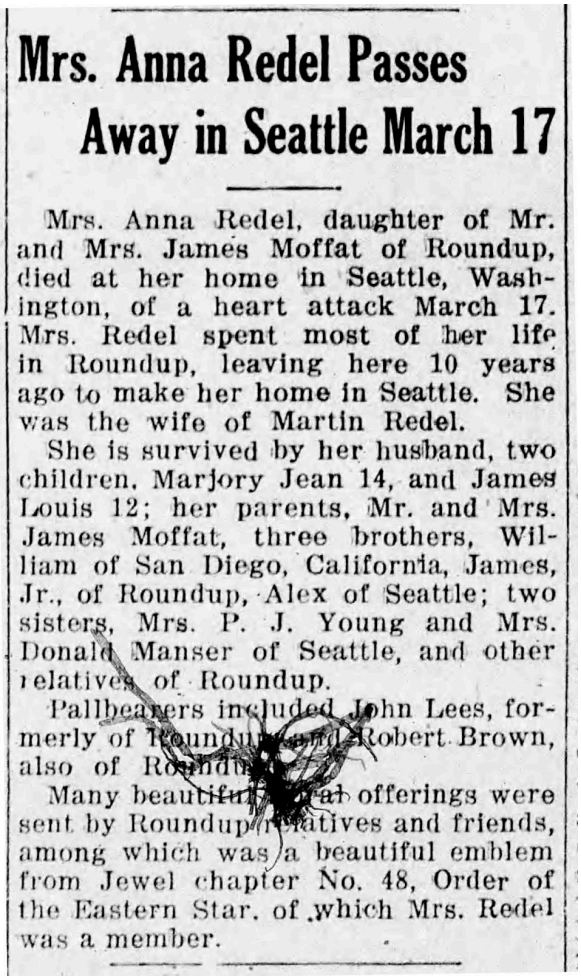


There may be a certain amount of zest in feeding succulent worms to lethargic fish but we have had no experience. In Montana fishing means luring fighting trout and grayling in mountain lakes and white water streams with a fly or spinner. When you drop them a line you are pretty sure to get an answer. If you hook them they may come boiling out in a graceful arc to take a look at you and then they go away from there in a very fast and earnest manner. Our trout come in many sizes and models.

The State Fish and Game Department operates hatcheries and keeps the waters stocked.

While Indians aren't swarming out on the war path in Montana any more there are still a lot of rugged individualists amongst them who have not degraded themselves by adopting the white man's ways and habits. Our Indians are pretty gaudy looking aborigines when they get strung out at ceremonials. Their tribal dances are sure picturesque. They make the civilized terpsichorean tantrums of today seem plumb puerile.

Montana has seven reservations where famous tribes and the descendants of well known warriors now live.



Mrs. Anna Redel Passes Away in Seattle March 17

Mrs. Anna Redel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Moffat of Roundup, died at her home in Seattle, Washington, of a heart attack March 17. Mrs. Redel spent most of her life in Roundup, leaving here 10 years ago to make her home in Seattle. She was the wife of Martin Redel.

She is survived by her husband, two children, Marjory Jean 14, and James Louis 12; her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Moffat, three brothers, William of San Diego, California, James, Jr., of Roundup, Alex of Seattle; two sisters, Mrs. P. J. Young and Mrs. Donald Manser of Seattle, and other relatives of Roundup.

Pallbearers included John Lees, formerly of Roundup, and Robert Brown, also of Roundup.

Many beautiful floral offerings were sent by Roundup relatives and friends, among which was a beautiful emblem from Jewel chapter No. 48, Order of the Eastern Star, of which Mrs. Redel was a member.

The Roundup Record 1943

The passing of Anna Redel was a tragic event in James and Marjorie's young lives. The Moffat family decided that the siblings would be separated. Margie went to her Aunt Marion's house. Aunt Jean owned a house on Loyal Way in Ballard and she arranged for James to live with his Grandma Moffat there and complete 6th grade at Loyal Heights Elementary. Having just turned 12 years old, his mother's death was surely the defining event in his life. James was extremely close to his sister and was unhappy being apart from her. Margie married at age 15. Jim, except for his years in the Navy, lived with, or close to her, for the rest of his life
